Notes

The Toddler Times is compiled and published quarterly as a joint effort of the local interagency coordinating councils (LICCs) in the Richmond area: Richmond Infant Council (828-2742); Chesterfield LICC (768-7205); Henrico, Charles City & New Kent LICC (261-8524)

To save costs, LICCs may send only 1-2 newsletters per agency. Please share this newsletter with others in your agency who may be interested in learning more about early intervention and/or who provide services to young children with developmental delays and/or disabilities and with families.

Families involved in Part C early intervention in the City of Richmond or in the counties of Chesterfield, Henrico, New Kent, or Charles City are encouraged to share their experiences with others through this newsletter. If you would like to contribute your family's story, please contact the local interagency coordinating council (LICC) in your area. Stories shared through this newsletter reflect the individual experiences—and, on occasion, the individual opinions and beliefs—of the family submitting the story. These experiences, opinions and beliefs may be quite different from your own. LICCs strive to reflect the diversity of the children and families participating in early intervention through the family stories printed in this newsletter. All families are valued in the early intervention system.

Virginia Early Intervention System Gets New Name, Makeover

Goodbye,
Babies Can't Wait...

Hello,
Infant & Toddler Connection of Virginia

This spring, the Lead Agency for Part C Early Intervention Services in Virginia—the Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation, and Substance Abuse Services—will unveil its new, much-anticipated early intervention public awareness campaign. The campaign will reflect the state's new name for the early intervention system, Infant & Toddler Connection of Virginia. A new system logo and identity will soon be in use statewide. The RIC will begin using new public awareness materials as they are provided by the Lead Agency. You should notice changes by May 2002 – Early Intervention Month!

Access Independence Receives Grant to Manage Training Funds

The VA Board for People with Disabilities (VBPD) has awarded a grant to Access Independence in Winchester, Virginia to manage the Training Fund for Consumer and Families. These funds provide opportunities for families and self-advocates with disabilities to attend conferences, training seminars and workshops on a local, state or national level.

Contact Access Independence directly to apply for funds. Sometimes if you apply too close to the time you need to register, you may have to pay out-of-pocket and then be reimbursed by the Training Fund, so it's in your best interest to apply enough in advance to allow time for approval for funding before you need to pay for the conference or workshop.

For more information, contact Janet Bixby, Consumer Training Fund Coordinator, at (540) 662-4452 or access@visuallink.com

Activities for Increasing Attention to Tasks and Sustaining Attention

Sometimes children have difficulty paying attention to one activity and/ or playing with one toy for any one length of time. When this happens, it makes learning about the toy and/or learning from the experience of the activity challenging. The following are just a few activities to assist your child in staying with an activity longer. Each activity consists of smaller steps that, when completed, will provide your child with a reward/ favorite activity. Use this list to assist you in thinking up additional activities that you know your child enjoys.

- Assist your child in preparing a favorite doll/ stuffed animal for bed before crawling into bed with it such as: put it's pajamas on, brush it's teeth, give it some water, kiss it goodnight and rock it to sleep.
- Assist your child in bringing his/her own plate, cup and spoon to the table before being seated to eat.
- Build up ten blocks, then knock them down.
- Put ten blocks into a wagon, then pull it.
- Find five objects to put into a child's grocery cart, then push it.
- Let your child assist you in preparing juice such as: removing it from the refrigerator or cabinet, stirring and pouring it, then drink the juice.
- Put all the toys away in the basket then go bye-bye.
- Put many blocks into a plastic container (peanut butter jar works), then shake and dance.
- Drop bath toys, washcloth, soap into the bathtub, then get into the bathtub and play.
- Assist your child in stringing big beads on a string, then wear it as a necklace.
- Place several small balls onto a blanket, then toss the blanket into the air. Wheel!

Remember to choose activities that when completed will be reinforcing to your child. For example, if your child does not like to wear necklaces she probably will not like to string many beads or if your child does not like to push or assist pushing a toy grocery cart, it will be difficult to sustain his attention while putting objects into it. There are going to be some steps that your child will need help with in completing. Don't worry about if he/she cannot do it by himself. Remember the outcome is to help your child stay with the activity longer and have fun!

Transition

This is the time of year when many families that have been receiving services under Part C of IDEA (early intervention services for infants and toddlers and their families) begin in-depth discussions and planning for transition to Part B of IDEA (special education services). If you are one of these families, please work closely with your Part C service coordinator to ensure that the needs of your child and family are supported throughout the transition process. Your service coordinator can also explain the rights that you have in this process. Remember, service coordinators are there to help!

The following article by Jan F. Aster, an Occupational Therapist with Chesterfield County Public Schools, contains helpful tips that we are pleased to pass along to you.

Talk, talk, talk!

Begin using school related words and phrases with your child on a daily basis (school, bus, teacher, classroom, snack, potty). If possible, ride by the school building or arrange an early visit with the principal. PLAY! Point out school buses as they pass you on the road. Try setting time aside to look at a picture book to read a story about school and related topics. Use toys during your time together. This special time together may help to bring the feelings of security and comfort to your child when he or she is away from you and at school.

Bridge the gap!!!

It's a great idea to begin to use the items that your child will have at school, so that he or she can become familiar with them. Having a few familiar things for comfort may help your child relax if he or she is having difficulty adjusting to the new environment. Your child will probably need a book bag, a small lunch or snack bag, and a rest mat (check the child's supply list as needs are different for each location). Now is a great time to begin to use these items to serve lunch or snack, and to use the same mat or blanket during rest or nap time at home as at school.

Prepare!!!

Being in a structured program for the first time may be a different experience for your child. Try to introduce routines into your day that will help your child prepare his or her body to adjust to the new schedule. Waking up and going to sleep and rest time, having “playing time” and a “clean up time” may help your child get used to the routine of school. Help your child learn how to transition by letting him know what you are going to do next 5 or 10 minutes before you begin new activities.

If your child has never been away from home before, now is a good time to begin separate by leaving him or her with a trusted family member, neighbor, or friend for short period of times.

Above all, transition to school will expose your child to new sights, sounds, and smells. Help your child learn to adjust to new environments and sensory experiences by providing reassurances and demonstrating a positive attitude!! Share those special tricks for comforting your child with the school personnel.

Come to the Open House!!!

Bring your child, and siblings, grandparents, and all other family members who spend time and care for your child. It will help for everyone to be familiar and comfortable with the people and places where your child will be spending a large part of his or her day. If you can't visit in person, try to send a note or make a call and talk to you child's new teacher or in person.

Sharing information about your child and establishing a pleasant and positive relationship early on will help open channels of communication which will be essential for building trust and comfort.

Communicate!!!

Meet your child's teacher, teacher's assistant, and therapist in person. Schedule a time that is good for everyone as early on in the school year as possible. Help school personnel understand your child's special needs, and share your tips with them. Learn new terminology and strategies from team members. Take every opportunity to share by arranging visiting times with your child's teacher and/or therapists during the school day.

BABY BOTTLE SYNDROME

What is it?

Baby Bottle Syndrome is a form of tooth decay that develops in infants and young children who are routinely given bottles when going to bed.

How is it caused?

Baby Bottle Syndrome is caused by a bottle that is filled with milk or a sweet liquid. It also can be caused by a pacifier that is dipped in honey. As the baby falls asleep, pools of sweet liquid collect around the teeth. This bathes the teeth in sugar and, over time, causes tooth decay.

What are the effects?

Chalky-looking areas that may appear on numerous teeth indicating that the enamel is starting to break down. Cavities develop and the tooth can eventually be destroyed to the gumline. Abscesses may develop and the child may experience pain and discomfort.

If your child takes a bottle to bed, please be sure that it is only filled with water!

On Children

– Khalil Gibran

And a woman who held a babe against her bosom said, “Speak to us of children!”

Your children are not your children. They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself. They come through you but not from you, And though they are with you, yet they belong not to you. You may give them your love but not your thoughts. For they have their own thoughts. You may house their bodies but not their souls, For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams. You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.

You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.

The archer sees the mark upon the path of the infinite, and He bends you with His might that His arrows may go swift and far. Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness; For even as he loves the arrow that flies, so He loves also the bow that is stable.
